Good morning,

My mommy said she could use a break today, so she asked if I would write to you. I am a little man of few words (but plenty of barks,) so I will keep this brief. Since assuming my new role, I have enjoyed reviewing messages from you and your pets. Even the occasional cat provides interesting insights that will help me better serve you. I also found it fascinating (and reassuring) that so many of you love and brake for turtles like my mommy does. You seem to especially enjoy pictures of me, and sometimes reciprocate with your own, so I will keep up that practice. My mommy bought me this new shirt this week, but she said I should wear it only on Casual Fridays because it doesn't have a collar.

I hope you all have a great weekend!

God Bless,
